

Little Simz's "I Love You I Hate You" artwork

29 New Songs Out Today

BrooklynVegan Staff

| July 8, 2021

SHARE

TWEET

Little Simz's "I Love You I Hate You" artwork

So many artists, so little time. Each week we review a handful of new albums (of all genres), round up even more new music that we'd call "indie,"
and talk about what metal is coming out
. We post music
news, track premieres, and more all day. We update a playlist weekly.

of some of our current favorite tracks. Here's a daily roundup with a bunch of interesting, newly released songs in one place.

LITTLE SIMZ – “I LOVE YOU, I HATE YOU”

Little Simz's new album Sometimes I Might Be Introvert

can't get here soon enough but “I Love You, I Have You” will have to hold us till September 3. Inflo's widescreen, soulful production is a luxurious backdrop for Simz' confessional track about “A woman who hasn't confronted all her Daddy issues.”

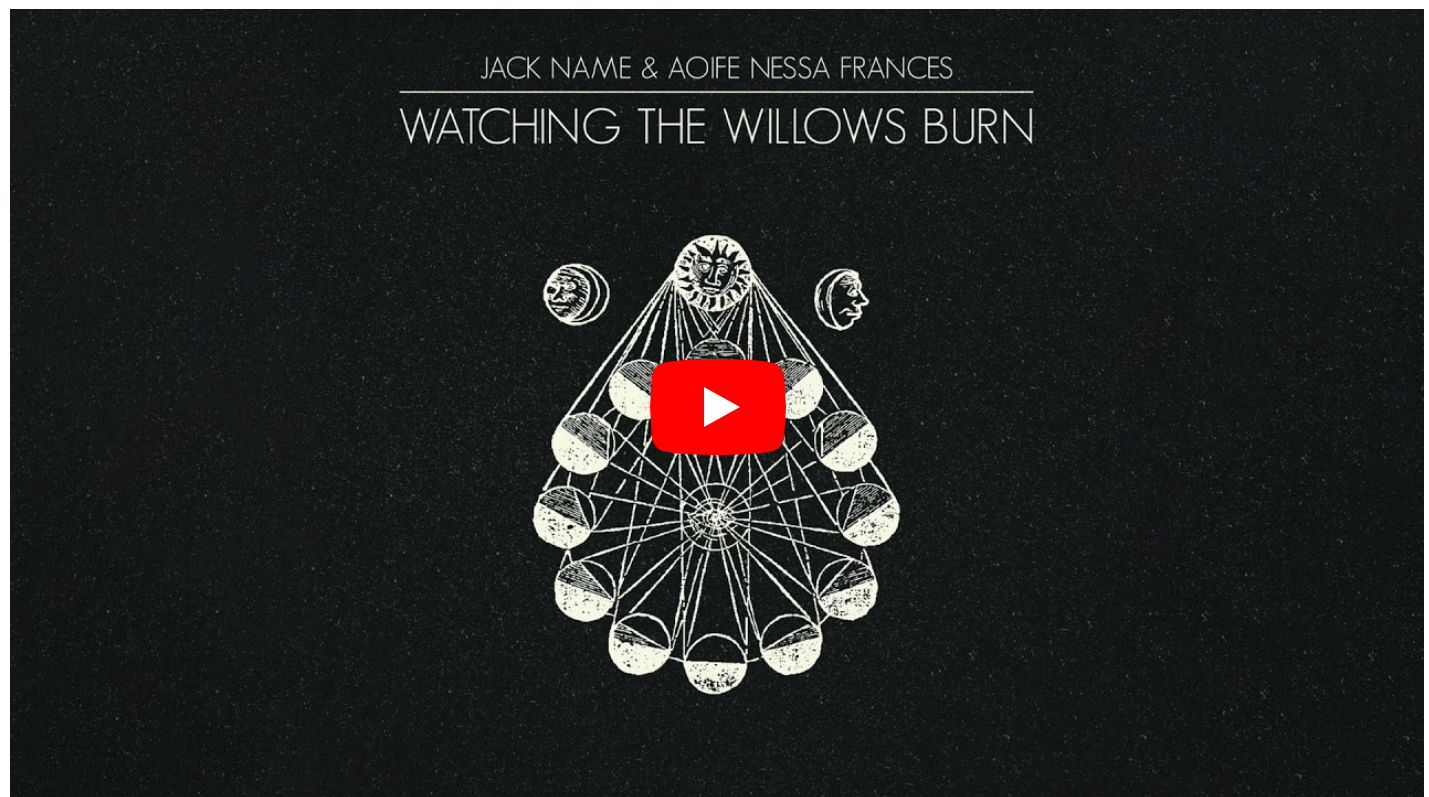

THE GOON SAX – “DESIRE”

Australian trio The Goon Sax release their third album, Mirror II

JACK NAME & AOIFE NESSA FRANCES – “WATCHING THE WILLOWS BURN”

Singer-songwriter Jack Name, who has produced Cass McComb records, and released his own music on Castle Face and other labels, has shared a new collaboration with Irish singer-songwriter Aoife Nessa Frances. Mexican Summer co-founder Keith Abrahamsson brought the two together, and they worked remotely on a lovely new single, “Watching the Willows Burn.” “A lot of our conversations drifted into topics like mysticism and ancient history,” they say. “We imagined a struggle between a peaceful group of moon worshipping people and maniacal totalitarian warlords. That sent us down a stream which eventually led to the different things willows can symbolize. It’s interesting how they can stand for purity and nourishment and also grief and death. So what does it mean to watch them burn in the dark? Perhaps a rebirth, whether healing or destroying, depends on who’s watching.”

MOTORISTS – “THROUGH TO YOU”

Toronto band Motorists will release their debut album, Surrounded, on September 3 via Bobo Integral, We Are Time and Debt Offensive Records. Fans of Kiwi Jr and Rolling Blackouts CF (or Cheap Trick, for that matter) will probably dig “Through to You.”

—

SELF ESTEEM – “PRIORITISE PLEASURE”

Self Esteem, the project of Rebecca Lucy Taylor of Slow Club, has announced her second album, Prioritise Pleasure, and shared the dancefloor-ready title track, which she says is “a wide screen mantra, remembering to put myself first and in turn making myself a better, more present person. My journey to accept myself is far from over, but over the last few years some of the age old simple shit has started to finally kick in. Love yourself, be in the moment, put your needs first – that all used to feel so abstract and impossible but with a bit of will power (and writing a tonne of songs about it), I finally not only see the benefits but am actively enjoying them.”