

Indie Basement (9/3): the week in classic indie, college rock, and more

Bill Pearis

| September 3, 2021

SHARE

TWEET

Happy Labor Day Weekend! Holidays usually mean it's a light release week but Indie Basement has a pretty full slate: Super Furry Animals give Rings Around the World the deluxe 20th anniversary treatment; SUUNS are back with their most chilled-out record to date; P.E. (Pills + Eaters) find their groove on their new EP; Ty Segall cohorts Meatbodies return with their first album in four years; Toronto's Motorists channel '90s Canadian indie rock on their jangly debut; Julian Cope dips into his archives of Cold War Psychedelia; and Slumberland Records continues to sign great new groups that fit into their long history with Chime School.

If you need more new album reviews, Andrew looks at Little Simz, Iron Maiden and more in Notable Releases

. And here are a few more items from this week that are of interest to regular Basement readers: The Pop Group made us a playlist of Dub Essentials

; Beak>

are back with a new single; Elbow

Motorists – Surrounded (We Are Time, Bobo Integral and Debt Offensive)

Toronto band channel the '90s Halifax pop explosion on their debut album that's chock-full of catchy indie rock

Chiming guitar rock, the kind made by Big Star, Tom Petty and Cheap Trick in the '70s and then mutated by new wave and college rock groups like The Plimsouls, R.E.M. and Hoodoo Gurus in the '80s, is not exactly in fashion these days. But it's never completely out of style, either. Groups like Rolling Blackouts Coastal Fever and Kiwi Jr are still flying the flag for jangly, muscular and melodic music, you can add to that list Toronto trio Motorists whose debut album pulls from the last 50 years of guitar pop, with a focus on the last 30 years or so. There's a little early-'80s powerpop precision, mid-'80s paisley underground psychedelica and the post-REM janglepop explosion, as well as '90s college rock, the Halifax indie scene, Britpop and beyond. Halifax has an especially strong pull here, and songs like "Natural Targets," "Vainglorious," and "Walled Garden" seem like they could've come out on Sloan's Murderrecords in 1993 alongside Jaill and The Super Friendz. Motorists can clearly play, and songs are loaded with big hooks, ripping leads and three-part harmonies, but the mid-fi keeps things just rough enough while letting the joy of guitars ring through.

—